PROTECTION OF THE PUBLIC: ETHICS & COLLEAGUES

6.0 hours, 05SW0044

OBJECTIVES

Understand the ethical duty to the public with regard to colleagues:

- ➔ who are impaired
- ➔ who are in case consultation
- ➔ who are acting unethically

Bruce Buchanan

Bruce Buchanan, A.C.S.W., L.I.S.W., B.C.D., Clinical Social Worker, is the Past Chair of the Iowa Board of Social Work Examiners, and is in private practice in Des Moines at Wadle & Associates. He is a clinical consultant for six Human Services Agencies in Central Iowa, a Family Therapy consultant for the Greater Des Moines Child Abuse & Neglect Council, and a Diplomate in Clinical Social Work.

This workshop will explore our responsibilities to each other from an ethical perspective. The importance of collegial interaction regarding our clients will be discussed.

Group participation and case discussion will be encouraged. This unique format will allow participants to discuss at length collegial ethical dilemmas they have encountered in their practice.

Each individual coming to this workshop will be asked to send, at the time of their enrollment, an ethical dilemma in the narrative form that can be used and discussed during the presentation. Participants are expected to change identifying information in their ethical dilemmas in order to honor the confidentiality of those involved.

Touching Tomorrow: Social Work Supervision - ETHICS AND EVIDENCE

6.0 hours 05SW0045

Dr. Munson, LICSW, Ph.D., BCD, is Professor at the University of Maryland School of Social Work and serves as Director of the Washington Area Supervision Institute at Woodstock Forest. Dr. Munson holds an MSW and Ph.D. degrees from University of Maryland. He has held faculty appointments at Shepherd College, Catholic University of America, University of Houston, and Fordham University at Lincoln Center in New York City. Dr. Munson has published 7 books and 75 journal articles/book chapters. Dr. Munson is a clinician-scientist whose practice and research activity focuses on trauma and loss in children. Since 1964, he has been doing child intervention, and conducting research on trauma in children and adolescents including international child abduction assessments and expert witness testimony. In 2000, Dr. Munson was the clinician in a precedent setting Maryland Court of Appeals child welfare case that affirmed the qualifications of licensed clinical social workers to perform DSM-IV-TR diagnosis, to testify as experts, and to testify to ultimate issues. This case has had national implications for the practice of clinical social work in the United States.

Participants will:

- (1) develop skill in performing social work supervision in the rapidly changing practice environment;
- (2) develop skill in using supervisory techniques to address ethics, documentation, diagnosis and treatment planning, standards of practice, outcome measures, and competency;
- (3) become acquainted with legal aspects of social work practice, supervision and standards of care;
- (4) learn strategies for addressing issues of transference, countertransference, and stress;
- (5) learn methods to promote effective styles of interaction in the supervisory process;
- (6) develop understanding of appropriate use of differing supervision structures;
- (7) become familiar with assessment strategies in supervision practice;
- (8) learn techniques for use of theory in supervision; and
- (9) develop ideas regarding how to measure, evaluate, and promote effective supervision practice in an era of decreased funding.
